GREEKS' INTERESTS IN ASIA MINOR VITAL

Occupied Land Linked to Nation in Many Ways, Declares Attorney in Letter.

The viewpoints of Greece and Armenia on the recent action of the allied ministers in Paris in deciding between the Greeks and the Turks and that the Greeks should evacuate Asia Minor within five months are contained in letters to the Editor of The Star from Soterios Nicholson, an attorney of this city, and C. H. Papazian, secretary of the Armenian National Union of America, with headquarters in Boston, Mass.

Mr. Nicholson declares in his letter that the Greeks are the people most directly and vitally interested in the welfare of the Christians in western Asia Minor, because that territory was Greek from time immemorial and it is now occupied mostly by Greeks. Western Asia Minor, he said, is as much a Greek land as Macedonia and Thracia in history, geography, language and religion. "The allies, therefore, were right to send Greek troops to Asia Minor to enforce the treaty of Sevres and protect the Christians from being slaughtered by the Kemalists," he stated.

After the Kemalists' apparent attack on Pasha, in secret understanding with the Sultan, was organized the nationalist movement in Turkey to establish an independent government in Ankara, to repudiate the Sevres treaty and to wipe out the program of extermination of the remaining non-Muslim elements under his control. Mr. Nicholson says the Greeks, although mobilized against the Turks since 1912, "willingly accepted to bear the sacrifices necessary to liberate the Christians from the bloody Turkish."

Now the Greeks are called upon by the same allies to sign an armistice with Kemal Pasha and evacuate Asia Minor, continues the letter. "The wrong is apparent. The treaty of Sevres is the smallest part of justice that the Christian peoples of Asia Minor received as a most meager reward of their tremendous sacrifices to the cause of the allies."

Mr. Papazian, speaking for the Armenians, says: "The revision of the treaty of Sevres in favor of the Turks just made by the allied ministers in conference at Paris and the violation of the solemn pledges made to the Armenian people during the war and since the armistice is so flagrant a break of international honor as to necessitate protest from America. This, if we may judge from the opinion voiced in the press, is the feeling of the whole country."

"More Than a Betrayal." Mr. Papazian says the action of the allied ministers involves "more than a betrayal of a particular people. It amounts flatly to a repudiation of obligations and engagements made with America upon her entrance into the war."

Such gross disregard of elementary justice, he said, unless in some degree righted, "cannot fail to rankle in the heart of humanity and to lead to serious estrangements between peoples and in the end to further conflicts."

"America," he continued, "will be doing no more than the world expects and her own honor demands if she informs the allied powers that the betrayal of the Armenian people was not one of the objects for which she sent her men overseas."

In reference to the armistice, Mr. Nicholson says: "There can be no armistice between Turkey and any other nation, much less with Greece. The Turks have no honor to observe the terms of an armistice, nor of any treaty between themselves and a Christian nation. All treaties and agreements they regard as scraps of paper. This is not a new instance of the Turks' respect for the law. It has been proved time and again ever since they overran Asia Minor. Wherever the Turks came they built nothing; they destroyed everything. History tells the facts. The Turks are incapable and unworthy to rule over Christians. The allies, who found it necessary to send Greek troops to Asia Minor, must leave them there to guarantee the peace and prosperity of the land that gave us our religion and civilization. The allies should not insist upon an armistice at the time, when the final blow is soon to be delivered to the brigands of Kemal Pasha."

TEXACO GASOLINE

THE VOLATILE GAS

(Volatility is the readiness with which gasoline gives up its power)

Use up the rest of that gasoline in your tank; drain it out dry; fill up with Texaco Gasoline—and then never fill with any other.

From that minute you will get greater mileage. You will get easier starting. You will notice more sensitive acceleration. And from that minute your upkeep costs will begin to drop. Do that and you will have a better car.

Drive up to any Texaco pump for Texaco Gasoline. It's the volatile gas—there's the difference.

Texaco Motor Oils are heavy-body lubricants and are distinguished by their clear pale color. Light, medium, heavy and extra-heavy—they fit all cars and all conditions. You will find them wherever you see the Texaco red star.
